Autumn 2026

Editorial

With the new academic term under way, this issue of the magazine explores the schools, community groups, sports clubs and volunteers making a difference across the borough, and introduces some of the people behind that work.

From the school that is embracing outdoor learning, to local people giving up their time to help mentor a young person; and from the dedicated school staff helping pupils succeed, to community-led projects in our towns that are bringing people together.

It is also the time of year when many families start thinking about school applications, so we have included information to help guide you through the process. And, with colder months on the way, you will find practical tips on keeping energy bills down to avoid any unwelcome cost increases (p31). We also highlight some of the work being done to keep residents safe, from community safety initiatives to support services and partnership work tackling local concerns (p33).

There is plenty to celebrate too, from this year's sports awards to the latest winner of the Seasons of Ealing photo competition.

New theatre proposed for the borough

Plans for a temporary theatre in Ealing, that would bring West End shows to the borough, were due to be discussed this week.

When Around Ealing went to print, the proposal was due to be discussed at a meeting of Ealing Council's decision-making cabinet on 9 September.

The proposal is for a pilot project of a 1,200-seat theatre in a temporary structure in Walpole Park for 3 years, with 8 or more shows a week. It would be run, paid-for and managed by a theatre company. The intention is to help fulfil aims in the council's 4-year plan for 2026-2030 to attract more high-quality culture and arts to the borough for residents to enjoy, while also supporting the local economy by bringing in visitors.

We will remember...

This year, Remembrance Sunday is on 8 November. You can attend a local service in the morning; with the borough's 3 key, traditional events expected to take place once again in Southall, Greenford and Ealing. The largest one is traditionally held in Ealing, where the mayor of Ealing, Councillor Faduma Mohamed, will attend a parade and ceremony at Ealing War Memorial on Ealing Green, in front of Pitzhanger Manor. The King's representative Deputy Lieutenant Richard Kornicki will be attending the service, as will council leader Peter Mason. On Wednesday 11 November, Armistice Day marks the end of the First World War in 1918. At 11am, people across the country traditionally observe a 2-minute silence – at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month. Leader's notes

'We are hoping to move the West End west'

Council leader Peter Mason

Read Peter's blogs at aroundealing.com/leaders-notes

Culture has always been synonymous with our borough and our heritage. The borough has long been a powerhouse of British culture.

It is home to the renowned Ealing Studios, birthplace of the iconic Marshall amplifier, host of the London Mela and a centre of Britain's vibrant Bhangra scene, and the cradle of British rock music through the pioneering Ealing Club.

It has also nurtured remarkable creative talent, from filmmaker Gurinder Chadha, whose Bend It Like Beckham captured modern British multiculturalism, to actors such as Alan Rickman and legendary musicians like Freddy Mercury, helping cement the borough's place in the nation's cultural story.

The cultural sector also forms a key part of our local economy. The creative industries employ around 2,000 people locally. They are good quality, high skilled jobs in an industry where the UK leads the world. They are exactly the kind of jobs we want to attract as a borough to ensure all our residents have decent, well-paid work.

It has long been our mission that all residents benefit from the borough being at the forefront of global culture and everyone feels that their culture is recognised and valued as part of our heritage. That is why we stated in our cultural manifesto that we are seeking to create 367,100 creatives.

Part of our commitment to fostering the creativity of our residents is bringing cultural venues to the borough. At the last election we committed to a new West End quality venue in our borough and we will soon be consulting with you on how we will make this a reality.

Given the incredible talent we produce, you should not have to leave our borough to experience excellent culture. We want to inspire the next generation of local creatives as well as welcoming the world to experience the creativity of our borough.

We are hoping to move the West End west and we look forward to sharing our plans with local people in the months ahead.

Councillor Peter Mason
Leader of the council

From Nursery to Post-16

Ofsted: GOOD with OUTSTANDING features

At Alec Reed Academy, we believe that all children, regardless of background or ability, can succeed and we do all we can to ensure this happens. Children can start in the nursery at 3 and stay until they leave at 18, or join in Year 7 or Post 16. The Academy is housed in an iconic, spacious, light and modern building with extensive grounds including a large nature reserve which we are developing into an outdoor leaning centre using a generous donation from our sponsor, Sir Alec Reed.

Quotes from Ofsted 2023:

- Pupils at this school are safe and happy. They work hard and they are well prepared to take the next steps in their education, employment or training.
- Pupils behave well in lessons. They listen to their teachers and take pride in their work.
- Pupils are very respectful of others including those from different backgrounds and with different abilities.

Why not see for yourself what makes our Academy such a special place to be, by coming to one of our open days? Or, if you can't make it to an open day, we'd still love to show you around, so please call on 020 8841 4511 to arrange a convenient date.

Opening doors to opportunity

JOBS

"It has rebuilt my confidence. I would recommend it to anyone."

Binita Tamang is one of more than 1,000 local people helped to develop skills and find work by Ealing Council's learning zones.

She was speaking to us at the borough's new learning and skills hub, which was opened this summer at Ealing Council's Perceval House headquarters in Uxbridge Road by council leader Peter Mason and Howard Dawber, deputy mayor of London for business and growth. It has been part-funded by an almost £680,000 grant from the Greater London Authority.

The hub is building on the success of the borough's 7 learning zones – and it gives you access to all kinds of opportunities.

Whether you are looking to learn new skills to push your career forward; are looking for training or courses to build confidence, or to find a new job; or are a local business looking for recruits; the new hub has something for you.

Linking up the learning zones

The hub is based on a similar model to the borough's learning zones, but on a grander scale.

Run by Learn Ealing, the council's adult learning and skills service, it provides a space to connect residents with employers, education providers, and community organisations, while also creating a pipeline for local businesses to help them grow and develop their workforce.

Like the learning zones, the new hub can also link up a learning session at one of the zones to all of the other zones – so you might be in Acton, for example, but can access a training session being given in Southall.

'It made a real difference'

The first learning zone opened in Northolt in 2022, and there is now one in each of the borough's 7 towns.

Binita previously worked as a dental nurse but, after several years out of employment because of caring responsibilities for family members, she found it daunting to return to work. But, after 2 Let's Get Digital courses with Learn Ealing at the Southall Learning Zone (at the library and Dominion Centre), she had developed new skills and rebuilt her confidence. And she got back into work this spring.

She added: "The learning has made a real difference. I now have two jobs: admin at a dental practice and bank support work in a school. It has rebuilt my confidence, opened the gates for further learning and helped me believe I can keep developing. I would recommend it to anyone who needs support to get started again."

SCHOOLS

Award-winning Hannah and proud students

Oscars of education

A Greenford headteacher is in the running for one of the UK's highest education awards after being recognised in this year's Pearson National Teaching Awards.

Hannah Widdison, headteacher at Stanhope Primary School, in Mansell Avenue, was announced as a Silver Winner in the Headteacher of the Year in a Primary School category in the summer. She will learn later this year whether she has secured the coveted Gold Award.

Often described as the 'Oscars of education', the Pearson National Teaching Awards celebrate the achievements of teachers, support staff and school leaders across the UK.

members and recognise their hard work on National Thank a Teacher Day in June.

Hannah said: "Towards the end of the assembly I saw my own children had come into the hall with my husband, and that's when I knew something was going on. I was blown away to find out I was a finalist.

"It was very emotional. It makes me incredibly happy to bring this award to Greenford."

Speaking about the recognition, Hannah said the award reflected the efforts of the entire Stanhope community.

"Although this award might have my name on it, this award shines a light on a remarkable community of children, staff, families and governors, who believe deeply in what is possible when everyone works together," she said.

Importance of community

Judges praised Stanhope's strong community spirit during visits to the school as part of the awards process.

This summer, under Hannah's leadership, Stanhope also became an Inclusion Quality Mark Flagship school. There are less than 150 schools with this accolade across England.

The Pearson National Teaching Awards Gold Award winners will be announced at a national ceremony in November.

A surprise announcement

Hannah discovered the news of her award in a special school assembly to thank all the school's staff

Our school heroes

From inspiring teachers to caretakers, office staff and lunchtime supervisors, we have been sent some more heart-warming stories about the people who work in the borough's schools and who deserve some recognition.

We wanted to share another selection of these local heroes and say a huge 'thank you' to everyone who plays a part in helping our schools thrive.

You can still nominate by emailing aroundealing@ealing.gov.uk – so keep an eye on future editions of this magazine to see more heroes.

Russell Hare is a site manager at Havelock Primary School, in Southall. He was nominated by the school's assistant headteacher, Amy Braid, for going above and beyond.

She said: "Despite always having so much to do, Russell always makes time to check in with the pupils and listens to what they say. The children will run up to greet him, give him a high five, and tell them something about their day so far, which he will always react to with excitement and joy."

"He always accepts the daily surprise maintenance jobs with a smile - nothing is too much trouble. He doesn't just make our school run smoothly, he is an asset to our school culture and community."

Roksana Sak, a reception teacher at Montpelier Primary School, in Ealing, was nominated by a parent for doing a great job.

The nomination read: "She always has a kind smile on her face for each child. One particular example I'd like to share is when my daughter was not enjoying PE as she did not like the uniform, which is black leggings and a black jumper. Ms Sak offered to wear all black too and my daughter really started enjoying PE after this."

Rosanna Wall, a Year 4 teacher at St Raphael Primary School, in Northolt, also received a nomination from a school parent.

They said: "My child has additional needs and Ms Wall gave him the confidence to talk up and to keep trying. She would always provide me with extra support and tools to help him. My son had the pleasure in having her teach him again in another year group, I was so happy."

Leaders have developed a friendly and welcoming school community. Pupils are happy, resilient and eager to learn.

Turning the classroom inside out

Pupils are getting hands-on with learning

A new outdoor learning centre the size of 3 football pitches has been unveiled at a school in Northolt, giving pupils the chance to swap the classroom for hands-on experience in nature.

Academy Fields at Alec Reed Academy opened in July, and its new outdoor classroom and wildlife pond are already transforming lessons, with pupils digging, planting and even pond dipping as part of their school day.

The project got under way earlier this year, following a £1million donation from the REED Foundation.

From seed to plate

Students have been busy creating raised beds, planting spinach, lettuce and other vegetables, and caring for young apple, pear and plum trees that will form a fruit orchard in the coming years. The aim is for pupils to follow the journey from seed to plate and harvest their own produce.

Nina, a pupil at the school, said that being able to learn outdoors has changed her experience of school.

"We have been planting different kinds of tomatoes, peppers and ginger," she said. "I like how you can explore nature and see new things, and how big the vegetables can get. Then you can eat them and see how they taste.

"In the classroom it is very organised, but outside you can see many different things, such as bugs, which you can learn about. I am excited to use the pond. I will be looking for lily pads and maybe even frogs."

'More space and time to think'

The new wildlife pond is already a focal point for science lessons, helping pupils to learn about biodiversity. The wider site also includes allotments, fenced paddocks and an outdoor space for learning.

The school's outdoor learning manager, Jonathan Groom, said the space is especially important for students who may not otherwise have access to outdoor space.

"Around 40% of our students have no outdoor space at home," he said. "There are parks in the borough but having a good quality, outdoor space pupils can use frequently through their learning makes a real difference."

Jonathan added that the outdoor setting offers pupils a different way of learning.

He said: "You have 30 children in a tight room. Out here, they have more space and more time to think. There is choice in how they use the space, and it changes with the seasons. That is very different from the classroom."

Opening up new futures

The centre is already used by pupils across all age groups at the school. This includes nursery and reception children, who visit each week to run, play and explore outdoors, and older pupils who take part in food growing and land-based learning.

Principal and CEO Phil Cosby said the centre is about giving pupils different opportunities.

He said: "We want children to leave school in the best possible position they can. That will not be the same pathway for everyone."

As well as supporting pupils' wellbeing and reconnecting them with nature, the project also introduces them to career paths beyond traditional classroom-based routes. The school is planning to offer a GCSE in land studies, and a group of Year 9 pupils has already started an introductory BTEC in the subject.

There are also plans to expand the site further, with beehives being installed, and longer-term ambitions to introduce beekeeping and small-scale livestock as part of an urban farm approach.

Following the opening of Academy Fields in July, the school is exploring opportunities for community groups and other local schools to also make use of the space in the future.

Ready to apply?

Summer is over and it is that time again. If your child is due to leave their primary school next summer, you need to apply for a high school place.

For children due to start year 7 at a high school in September 2027, you have just over a month to choose your preferences. But you can do it right now – applications are open.

The recommended deadline for sending in your application is 23 October 2026. And the absolute latest, final, date is 31 October 2026.

Choosing which school your child will attend is a big decision and the applications process can sometimes feel daunting. The council's admissions team does all it can to make the application process as easy as possible.

And local high schools hold open mornings and evenings so you can get a feel for them before making a final decision.

But, if you still need some support, you can visit the council's website, contact the schools you are interested in, or speak to your child's current school.

Schools information

To find out more about your preferred schools, you can visit the admissions pages on the council's website at www.ealing.gov.uk/

There's more...

To see dates for high school open days, go to: ealing.pagetiger.com/around-ealing-autumn-2026/page26.htm admissions or, alternatively, you can contact the schools themselves. Each school will also be holding an open morning or evening – see the box on this page for how to find out more.

How to apply

You can apply online at www.eadmissions.org.uk between 1 September and 31 October 2026. If you are unable to apply online, you can ask your current school for an application form to fill in and ask it for instructions if anything is not clear.

If you choose to apply online, you must not complete a paper application as well. The Cardinal Wiseman (Catholic) and Twyford (Church of England) high schools require a supplementary information form to be completed to assess denominational commitment, and these may be obtained from the schools themselves.

New schools

Any new schools proposed to open in 2027 will be outside the co-ordinated application process. Parents intending to apply to those schools will need to contact the school direct and use its own application form. Parents are strongly advised to also apply for established secondary schools through the co-ordinated system because there is no guarantee that new schools will open in 2027.

Any questions?

Visit www.ealing.gov.uk/admissions or you can get in touch with your preferred school.

Discover Islip Manor High School – a brand new school.

Conveniently located on Eastcote Lane, just a five-minute walk from Northolt Leisure Centre. Our purpose-built campus has been designed for modern education, featuring world-class facilities, including an on-site cinema.

Through our partnership with the Music in Secondary Schools Trust, every Year 7 student receives a musical instrument and specialist tuition, while our collaboration with Future Stars provides talented young athletes with an exciting pathway from ages 11–18, combining academic excellence with opportunities in sport and beyond.

APPLE at the core of local lives

COMMUNITY

From building robots to decorating a themed tree trail, it has all been happening in Acton.

Children and families in the town have been immersing themselves in a whole range of activities funded through Ealing Council's Your Voice Your Town programme.

APPLE, a youth charity based in the ARTBLOCK building in Acton Park, received £12,500 to run a series of events inspired by ideas suggested by local parents and children.

The staff tend to have been past users of APPLE, so it is a passion project for them.

Jake Barker, one of the APPLE team, said: "We rely on grants like this to run APPLE and all its projects, and our events are always really popular. We try to be unique in our approach and make it as fun as possible for everyone who attends."

Over the summer, families took part in a range of creative and educational sessions, including robot making workshops, arts and crafts activities, and community gardening projects.

The funding has also helped to develop APPLE's popular tree trail and showcase the creativity of its young people. The tree trail includes a goblin tree, snake tree and monkey tree, designed to capture the imagination of visitors to the park and add colour and character to the area.

Getting creative

Growing together

As well as supporting creative activities, the grant helped APPLE run gardening sessions that brought residents together to learn new skills, connect with nature and help care for community green spaces.

These projects were all funded through the council's Your Voice Your Town programme, which gives residents and community groups a say in how funding is invested in projects that benefit their neighbourhoods.

The centre is open 6 days a week and, on 5 of those days, it provides regular freshly cooked meals to the young people who go there, as well as teaching them how to cook and about good nutrition.

A lasting impact

Abi has been a full-time member of staff at APPLE for 5 years. She said: "We know we matter to a lot of these young people because I was that child once."

"I remember all I wanted to do was finish school and go to the ARTBLOCK and hang out. I learnt how to knit here too. There was a grandma tree that we were making scarves for to hang on the branches – and it's a skill I still have."

Funding programmes like the council's Your Voice Your Town initiative are what help APPLE to keep its doors open and continue supporting young people and families in Acton.

More free school meals

Does your family receive Universal Credit? Do you have children at a state-funded school? If your answer to both of those is 'yes', then they will soon be entitled to receive free school meals.

From September, big changes are being made to the rules to enable more children to be able to have a free lunch at school.

What is new?

Some families are already entitled to free school meals because they receive Universal Credit and have an annual household income of £7,400 or less. These families will continue to be receive free school meals.

However, a new category has been created to cover pupils whose family's household income is higher than £7,400. As long as they receive Universal Credit, they will now also be able to claim free school meals from September 2026.

How does this affect me?

Everyone already registered for free school meals will be reassessed automatically this summer and informed whether they will still be eligible for free meals in the 2026-27 academic year. You do not need to do anything.

- However, if your child is not currently registered as eligible for free school meals, but you receive Universal Credit, you will need to apply via the council's website. Visit ealing.gov.uk/freeschoolmeals to find out more and apply.

There is no change for younger pupils. This year, all primary school children in London have been able to eat a free school meal each day. And this is due to continue in the new academic year 2026-2027. However, it is still important to register your child for free school meals in case there are any changes to funding in the future.

Is there other help available?

Yes. Although meal vouchers for school holidays have now ended, families can still find a variety of other support. You can:

- apply for a crisis payment – you can ask for a one-off payment if you are struggling to buy food, or pay for energy bills or other essential living costs. Visit ealing.gov.uk/crf
- check you are getting everything you can by using the council's online benefits calculator at ealing.gov.uk/benefitscalculator to do a quick and easy search. So far, almost 70% of people who have used the calculator have realised they are missing out on financial support
- visit the council's website at ealing.gov.uk/costofliving for other advice and to find local organisations for help.

Meanwhile, families that are registered for free school meals because they receive Universal Credit and have an annual household income of £7,400 or less, will continue to qualify for the council's free Holiday, Activity and Food (HAF) programme during the Christmas, summer and spring holidays.

Leaders have developed a friendly and welcoming school community. Pupils are happy, resilient and eager to learn.

A mentoring match

Mentoring can provide young people with a source of support when they need it most – whether it is sharing their ambitions, working through challenges or seeing things from a different perspective.

That is something 19-year-old care leaver Nas has discovered since being matched with mentor Ana through Ealing Council's partnership with mentoring charity MCR Pathways and the council's care leavers team.

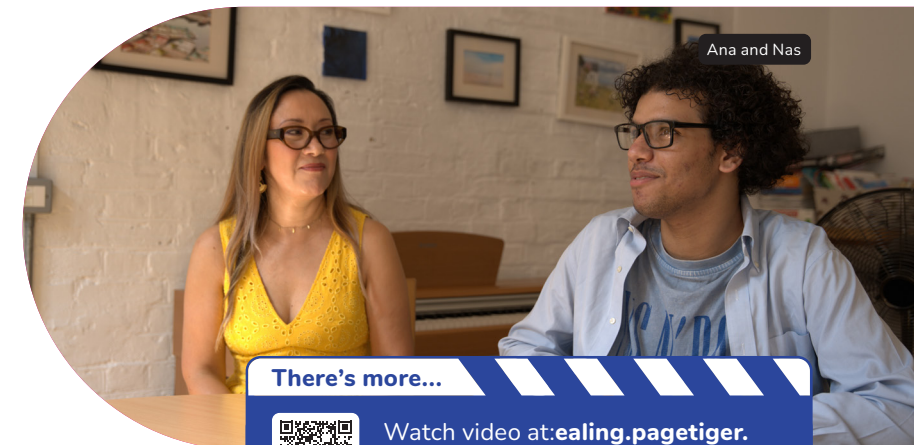

The pair have been meeting for around an hour every week since last summer, sometimes at the council's Horizons Centre, which supports young people in care and those who have recently left care.

'Quite scary...but worth it'

Nas said: "It's good to have a mentor and someone else's perspective on what's happening in your life and Ana has been a good match for me. It is quite scary putting your trust into someone, but it's been worth it."

'Not a teacher or social worker'

Ana, who works in fashion and enjoys art and ballroom dancing in her spare time, signed up to become a mentor because she wanted to support young people alongside her full-time job.

There's more...

She said: "When I met Nas, I found him very articulate and funny, and someone who had lots of interests."

"A mentor is not a teacher or social worker. It's an opportunity to offer guidance to a young person, help them with things they might like to achieve, and sometimes it's just about being someone that they can share things with."

"These young people have their whole life ahead of them, and I can be a small part of that."

Keeping students at school

Their story reflects the wider impact of volunteer mentors in the borough, who spend just 1 hour a week building relationships with young people.

As well as working with the care leavers through the Horizon Centre, MCR Pathways also runs similar schemes in 2 of the borough's high schools and is looking to offer it to more.

Recent results have highlighted that young people who were regularly missing school when they joined the programme are attending more often, staying engaged in education, and avoiding suspension.

The programme is also benefiting those who volunteer. They say that it gives them a sense of fulfilment, helps develop their active listening skills, and makes them feel more connected to their local community.

Become a mentor

MCR Pathways is looking for more volunteer mentors across the borough. Volunteers receive training, safeguarding guidance and ongoing support.

SCHOOLS

Primary school places

It is a huge moment.
Time flies and, all of a sudden, your child is due to start primary school in September 2027. Did you know you can apply for places right now?

From 1 September, you can submit an application under the London-wide primary school admissions scheme. Your application will come into Ealing Council, listing your preferences.

You can read the borough's admissions prospectus online at www.ealing.gov.uk/admissions

What to do

All parents and carers living in the borough need to list up to 6 different schools that they want to apply for, including any that are located outside the borough (but not private schools).

Your choices have to be ranked in order of preference, from 1 to 6.
Only one offer can be made to you, and this would be from the highest ranked school from your list that is available.

The closing date for applications is 15 January 2027. If you are unsure of what to do, or want to know more about a school, you can visit the council's website and you can also speak to the schools you are most interested in.

How to do it

Apply online at www.eadmissions.org.uk and get support at www.ealing.gov.uk/admissions

What happens next?

After the deadline on 15 January,
the applications will be processed.
Then, on the London-wide offer day on 16 April 2027, an offer will be made to all applicants, as far as practically possible. If a school is over-subscribed, its published admission criteria will be used to decide the order in which applicants are offered a place.

Useful to know

If you want to apply for a place at a faith school, you will also, in addition, need to fill in the school's own 'supplementary information form'. These are available from the schools concerned.

The supplementary form must be returned to the school before the closing date. For more information, contact the school(s) concerned.

If you want to apply for a place at a school in another borough, it is important you read the primary prospectus for that borough to make sure you understand the admission criteria for the schools you are applying to.

A club for the whole borough

What do 17,000 schoolchildren, the Ealing Mini Mile, the birthplace of British rock, and a record-breaking rugby season have in common?

They are all part of the same Ealing story.

Ealing Trailfinders is proud to play a growing role in that story. Not simply as a rugby club based in the borough, but as one determined to represent, celebrate and contribute to the community around it.

“Ealing is much more than the location in our name,” said managing director Ben Ward. “It is a fundamental part of who we are. We want to celebrate the people, places and institution that make this borough so special, and to play our own part in sharing their stories.”

Pitching in for the community

That role reaches well beyond 80 minutes of rugby every weekend.

Trailfinders players are regularly out across the borough, meeting local people and helping inspire the next generation. This summer, they have been part of Ealing Broadway’s Sportropolis Summer of Fun, delivering family rugby activities and encouraging children and shoppers to get moving through the sport.

The club’s community team has now engaged more than 23,000 people, including more than 17,000 children through its work in schools. With programmes built around health, inclusion, education and innovation – including mixed-ability and walking rugby sessions – the aim is to make sport accessible and enjoyable for everybody.

That commitment continues through the club’s sponsorship of the Ealing Mini Mile, helping young people experience the excitement of a major community sporting event. A new Ealing Trailfinders community on Strava, ‘The Trail Club’, also offers local runners, walkers, and cyclists together, wherever they are on their own trail.

Lots of ways to enjoy the rugby

For those who want to pick up a rugby ball themselves, Trailfinders runs one of the largest amateur rugby programmes around. Boys and girls can begin from aged 4 and continue through to under-18 level, while senior men’s and women’s teams give opportunities to keep playing, return to the game or try it for the first time. On the women’s side, participation has increased by 66% in just 12 months, following the surge of interest around England Women’s Rugby World Cup victory – won, of course, with Trailfinders stars Meg Jones and Abi Burton in the team.

Watching rugby at Trailfinders is only part of the matchday. Before kick-off, the Funzone turns Trailfinders Sports Club into a day out of its own, with inflatable assault courses, reaction games, passing challenges, live music and a changing selection of food vendors. Even the club’s proud sponsors come and activate with a twist – how would you fair at a rugby lineout-inspired challenge to throw a rugby ball into 3 stacked washing machines?

With tickets starting from £10 for adults, £5 for under 18s and £2 for under 12s, it is one of the borough’s most entertaining and affordable family days out.

Peter Chandler, from Ealing Trailfinders Supporters Association, said: “There is a genuine sense of togetherness at Trailfinders. Matchdays are exciting, welcoming and full of familiar faces – but there is always room for somebody new. It is a club that represents Ealing proudly and makes supporters feel part of the journey.”

Records tumbling on trail to success

Exciting times lie ahead on the pitch. For the first time, BUCS Super Rugby will come to Ealing for both men and women, with partner University of Brunel representing the club’s growing pathway. Last season, Ealing Trailfinders’ professional men’s side set a new record, completing a remarkable regular season in the Eior Champ Rugby with 26 victories from 26 matches, and Trailfinders Women trailblazed by reaching their first-ever Premiership Women’s Rugby Final. With both sides determined to build on those achievements, there will be plenty to be excited about in the season ahead.

The club has shared that success by celebrating the borough it represents throughout. Last season, each match poster reimaged films associated with the iconic Ealing Studios. In 2026/27, attention turns to The Ealing Club and the artists and sound connected to the birthplace of British rock. It is a playful expression of something deeper: a club that carries Ealing on its chest, celebrating its heritage and confidently doing things differently.

Ealing Trailfinders would love to welcome you to Trailfinders Sports Club, and hope to see you this coming season. Find out more at ealingtrailfinders.com, or follow us on Instagram (@ealingtrailfinders / @trailfinderswomen).

Getting back on your feet

Did you know Acton Homeless Concern has been providing a lifeline for people facing homelessness, poverty, and isolation for more than 35 years?

The charity runs 2 drop-in centres in the town, and offers practical support, advice and a welcoming space for hundreds of people in need of help every week.

Based at Emmaus House in Berrymead Gardens, and the Damien Centre in Church Road, it provides free services ranging from hot meals and clothing to housing advice and health support.

Over the course of a year, the charity provides tens of thousands of hot lunches, breakfasts and refreshments, alongside other services.

It works closely with other organisations to give homeless people access to specialist support. These include Ealing Council's rough sleeping prevention team, Recovery Intervention Services Ealing (RISE), and homelessness charity St Mungo's.

'It makes me feel good'

The charity's work relies on a combination of dedicated staff, volunteers and supporters who give their time and resources to help others.

Stefan, 25, started volunteering for 2 days a week with the charity earlier this year after becoming unemployed.

He said: "I thought 'I've got time on my hands' and thought it would make sense to do something to give back to people that needed help. I was really impressed by just how kind and welcoming the team were when I joined.

"I volunteer because I have the time to offer help to others. I like having the opportunity to offer companionship to others, whether that's in the form of giving them a hot meal, a cup of tea, or just having a chat. And, it makes me feel good that I've done something productive with my day."

'Extremely important'

The charity supports people from all walks of life. Some are homeless, while others are struggling with financial hardship, loneliness or other difficult life circumstances. This can typically include refugees, or people leaving care, prison or the armed forces, and also those affected by relationship breakdown, ill health, or rising housing costs.

Colin found it hard to adjust to everyday life after he came out of the military. He was homeless for a number of years, and it took him time to get back on his feet. Acton Homeless Concern has been a huge help in getting him there.

He said: "The staff are very knowledgeable and helpful. If you've got any problems, they'll make a phone call, go on the computer, and help with things like benefits. It's an extremely important service and offers me a daily routine. Rose is a master chef too."

Ian Breen is the centre service manager and has been working for Acton Homeless Concern for 18 years. He said: "We see a lot of positive outcomes from people who use our services."

COMPETITION

A shot at fame

From buzzing bees to scenic sunsets and playful pets, this year's Seasons of Ealing summer photo competition attracted some fantastic entries. After a public vote and a final review by our judging panel, we can now reveal the winner.

Residents were invited to vote for their favourite photographs from a shortlisted selection. The 3 pictures with the most votes then went forward to a panel of judges, who selected the overall winner.

And the winner is...

The winning summer photograph was taken by Chris van Dyk, whose picture of a bumblebee covered in pollen in Pitshanger Park impressed both voters and judges. It won the popular vote, and the final decision by the panel.

As well as appearing in Around Ealing magazine, Chris receives the top prize of 2 tickets to enjoy a film at Ealing Picturehouse cinema.

The runners-up were Olivia Law-Zygadlo with a picture of children enjoying the dinosaur sculptures in Pear Tree Park, Perivale and David Bean's photo of a crane overlooking Brent Valley golf course at sunset.

They will each receive a cinema ticket from Ealing Picturehouse.

Enter the autumn competition

Feeling inspired? Entries are now open for the Seasons of Ealing autumn photo competition.

We are looking for photographs that capture the colours, characters and atmosphere of autumn in the borough. Whether that is snaps of a community event, a family day out, golden leaves in your local park, sightings of autumn wildlife, or a striking scene from your street, we would love to see your pictures.

Good luck and thank you to everyone who entered and voted in this year's summer competition. We cannot wait to see the borough through your lens this autumn.

Beating the chill

Trying to keep your home cosy and your energy bills down can be stressful, particularly with costs likely to remain high this winter. But help is at hand.

If you prepare now, you can avoid any nasty shocks when the current energy price cap ends at the end of September.

Right now, a typical household in England pays about £1,862 a year for gas and electricity. This is down to the energy price cap, a limit on energy companies that is set by the national regulator Ofgem. It doesn't cap your total bill, but it caps how much companies can charge for each unit of energy.

A new, national price cap in October will impact how much you pay for your energy this winter. Your bills might go up if the cap goes up.

What can I do?

You can check a price comparison website to see if you are on the best rate for your gas and electricity – and switch providers or tariff if you need to. But you can also do a number of simple things to save energy and keep costs down when doing everyday tasks. It all adds up:

- washing machines: only run full loads and wash at 30°C where possible
- dishwashers: only run when full. And do not waste water and energy pre-rinsing dishes
- kettles: only boil the water you need and avoid overfilling the kettle.

I'm struggling. Is help available?

A good place to start, if you are struggling to pay your bills, is to contact Healthy Homes Ealing. It is service from Ealing Council that can offer help and advice to help you save energy and cut fuel bills.

Its free advice line is available Monday–Friday, 9am–5pm, and you may be able to organise an in-home consultation with a 'green doctor' free of charge.

The green doctors can check if you are eligible for government support, including the warm homes discount, or support for upgrading your boiler.

You can contact Healthy Homes Ealing by calling 0800 083 2265 or submit an online form on the council website at www.ealing.gov.uk/HealthyHomesEaling

Councillor Dominic Moffitt, Ealing Council's cabinet member for climate action, added: "Fuel poverty is very serious and the cost of living crisis over recent years has left some residents struggling to heat their homes when the weather gets colder. Healthy Homes Ealing exists to support residents to both stay warm and save money."

Taking double action

We need more foster carers

Ealing Council is looking for foster carers to provide loving, stable homes for the children we care for.

To recognise the vital role foster carers play, we offer an excellent package of support and benefits:

- council tax exemption for Ealing borough residents, and reimbursement for carers living elsewhere
- highly competitive fees and allowances
- free parking in resident controlled parking zones across the borough
- free garden waste collection
- dedicated therapeutic support from clinical psychologists
- out of hours support, peer networks and the Mockingbird scheme
- discounts at council leisure centres
- bespoke training and additional incentives

Foster with WEST LONDON

Whether it is street drinking, vandalism, noise nuisance or other behaviour that leaves people feeling uneasy, antisocial behaviour can have a real impact on their sense of safety, particularly at night.

Ealing Council is taking a double-edged approach to facing these issues head-on, to support Ealing Police: with both enforcement action and also prevention schemes.

Councillor Jasbir Anand, the council's cabinet member for tackling crime and antisocial behaviour, said: "Everyone deserves to feel safe in their neighbourhood. By combining strong enforcement with early intervention programmes, we're addressing antisocial behaviour, supporting young people and helping make our communities safer for everyone."

Dealing with nuisance

Since it was introduced by the council in 2019, the borough-wide Public Space Protection Order (PSPO) has helped officers tackle issues such as street drinking, aggressive begging, fly-tipping and intimidating behaviour. More than 500 fixed penalty notices have been issued and the PSPO has led to 51 prosecutions. In September, the council renewed the PSPO for another 3 years.

The council's CCTV network includes around 750 cameras, with 10 new mobile CCTV cameras due to be introduced this year as part of a wider programme to add 50 over the next 4 years.

Meanwhile, the council employs the Parkguard team to patrol parks, estates or specific locations identified by the council, 7 days a week, to complement the police and PCSO officers out on the beat.

Positive opportunities

The council is also investing in early-stage prevention schemes to help divert young people away from potentially getting involved in trouble themselves. MyEnds is a community-led programme funded by London's Violence Reduction Unit.

MyEnds gives young people opportunities to safely take part in sports, music and creative activities while building positive relationships with trusted, supportive adults.

Between 2024 and 2026, more than 1,500 young people took part in activities locally and more than 900 received targeted support in Northolt and Greenford.

During the same period 2024-2026, Greenford Broadway saw a 33% reduction in violent crime involving under-18s.

Touchdown triumph

SPORT

An all-action team with a distinctly American flavour was one of the big winners at the 9th annual Ealing Sports Awards this summer.

London Fruit Bats are a NFL Flag football team – a version of American football, or 'Gridiron'. The side has roots in Little Ealing Primary School and was only set up 4 years ago but is already making waves both here and across the Atlantic in the US.

The Fruit Bats were handed the Junior Club of the Year award at the awards in July run by Everyone Active and Ealing Council. The team shared the honour with West London Gymnastics.

Sport has 'exploded'

NFL Flag will be recognised at the Olympic Games for the first time in 2028.

"Interest in the sport across Britain has exploded, it's one of the fastest growing sports in the world," said the founder of the Fruit Bats, Jay Taylor, when talking to Around Ealing. He is also the team's coach.

Jay, who runs the Fruit Bats as a volunteer, started the club about 4 years ago after his youngest son Ethan was keen to play the sport.

"It has been quite the adventure," he said. "We were over the moon with our win at the Ealing Sports Awards and I hope that means more young people get to hear about us and want to get involved."

The club started off with less than a dozen players and has since soared to more than 110. They are the reigning British National Champions.

Earlier this year, 10 members of the team also jetted off to San Francisco to represent the UK in the International NFL Flag Championships. They had qualified after winning the 2025 NFL Flag International Championships in Loughborough.

And, 7 of the team have been selected for the Great Britain squad and are off to Italy to compete later this month.

'A sense of belonging'

Jay said: "We are winning things which is great, but the most important thing for me is the sense of belonging and offering a place to grow in confidence and to make friendships. And, it has become that."

The Fruit Bats' origins began after Ethan's interest in NFL flag football was sparked as a pupil at Little Ealing. The school's head of PE, Bobby Behzadi, introduced the sport there as an extra-curricular activity.

Soon after the Fruit Bats was established, Mr Taylor joined forces with Mr Behzadi to work alongside one another offering their coaching skills at both the club and school.

Lights, camera, celebrate

ActOne Cinema is preparing to celebrate its 5-year anniversary with a packed programme of film, music, and family activities this autumn.

The independent cinema in Acton High Street was once a library until it closed in 2014. The building remained disused until when Ealing Council opened it up for bids from the community to use the site.

Amanda Mason

The local group of volunteers behind the cinema idea won the bid and opened its doors in October 2021 after an impressive effort to transform the unused Grade II-listed building into a cinema and community space. Since then, it has become a popular local venue, attracting around 30,000 visitors each year.

A real show of community

Nearly 100 volunteers do their bit to help the cinema running by overseeing bookings, showing audiences to their seats, and making sure visitors receive a friendly welcome.

The band of volunteers are also organising a lot of the anniversary celebrations, taking place between 8-11 October.

Amanda Mason, one of the directors behind the project, said this has also been an opportunity to reflect on how far the cinema had come.

“When I look back over the last 5 years I feel very proud of what we have achieved here,” she said. “It has involved lots of people and plenty of hard work but has become an important fixture in the community. To see the enjoyment that so many visitors get from coming here is very rewarding.”

She added: “Being a part of ActOne has made me feel part of the community, and my friendship group has got bigger because of it.”

More than a cinema

Since opening, ActOne has become much more than a place to watch films.

In addition to its regular film screenings, it has hosted quizzes, live events, filmmaker Q&As, open mic nights and opportunities for young people to showcase all kinds of creative work.

Anniversary celebrations

The 4-day celebrations begin on Thursday 8 October with an event for founder members and supporters, including live music, a look back at the cinema’s first 5 years and a fundraising auction. A special film screening and Q&A takes place on Friday, while Saturday features live music, the cinema’s monthly film quiz and a silent auction.

The celebrations end on Sunday with a pirate-themed family workshop, and more.

Free souvenir programmes are available at the venue. For tickets and event updates, visit: www.actonecinema.co.uk

Power in your hands

Turning stories into strength

Carers across the borough have discovered the power of storytelling through a council-funded creative writing programme.

The weekly workshops took place over the summer at The DIG – a community growing space in Hanwell. It brought carers together to share their experiences, build confidence and rediscover their creativity.

The 8-week course, Care to Write, was led by Hanwell resident, author, and journalist, Emma Lindsey. It was funded by Ealing Council’s Your Voice, Your Town programme, which aims to support community-led change in each of the borough’s 7 towns and bring communities closer together. This allowed carers from across the borough to take part in the workshops for free.

Created for carers

Emma applied for the funding because she wanted to set up something special for carers who have to find ways of balancing the demands of their responsibilities with looking after their own wellbeing.

Hanwell DIG provided a tranquil setting for everyone who took part in the relaxed sessions that were designed to encourage their creativity while making new friends. Emma, who cares for her father with advanced dementia and holds a master’s degree in creative writing, said the idea grew from her own experience.

“Caring can be gruelling – physically and emotionally – and writing creatively has been my lifeline,” she said. “I wanted to offer more carers somewhere they could express themselves honestly and feel supported.”

Throughout the programme, carers explored different aspects of creativity while gaining confidence in their ability. For some, it was their first time putting their experiences into words.

“Some people arrived feeling unsure of themselves,” Emma said. “But, by the end, they were writing with real courage and clarity. It’s been incredible to see.”

Finding comfort through creativity

Maryanne is a carer for her husband. She joined the course to meet other carers that she could talk to and share experiences with.

She said: “It’s a lovely group and I really enjoyed taking part. I have found that writing things down and being more creative is really quite therapeutic.”

Participants also highlighted the value of meeting others in similar situations, forming connections that extended beyond the page.
